

I Have, Who Has

This activity is good for review. As far as I know, Marcie Cook developed it for math. The trick is to write it so that the last clue asks a question that is answered by the first question. Then you will know for sure that the class has gone through the entire series of questions.

The teacher writes cards for at least as many students as are in the class. If there are extra cards, some students can have more than one.